A Better Study Plan

Fatima is a Grade 10 student who has many things to do. She goes to school, helps her family, and enjoys spending time with friends. Last semester, she often forgot homework deadlines. She also spent too much time texting. She felt worried before tests.

One day, her teacher gave her a useful tip: make a weekly study schedule. Fatima bought a small planner and wrote her homework and test dates in it. Each afternoon, she looked at her to-do list and started with the most important task. After finishing a task, she crossed it off.

Fatima also changed her study routine. She put her phone away to concentrate. She used colourful flashcards to learn new English words and joined a study group to go through notes with classmates. At the weekend, she still had time to hang out with her close friends.

After a month, Fatima felt more organised. She finished her work on time and was less stressed. She understood that good self-management helps students balance school and free time.
