My First Week at College

Sara is a freshman at a university. She is excited but a little nervous because she is living away from home for the first time. Before coming to college, she met some students online. Now, she is happy to meet them in person.

Sara lives in a residence hall. She shares a suite with two roommates, Mary and Fatima. They are friendly and considerate. They keep their rooms clean and respect each other's privacy. Sara learns that shared living is easier when people get along and help each other.

On her first day, Sara joins a freshman support group. The group helps new students make friends and learn about college life. A student assistant introduces Sara to a tutor who can help her with difficult subjects.

One afternoon, Mary asks Sara, "Would you like to grab something to eat?" Sara smiles and says, "Yes!" They go to a café and talk about their classes. Before leaving, Mary says, "Catch you later!"

Sara also learns that students should use formal language when speaking to teachers and informal language with friends. She knows that students must follow college rules and participate in activities.

After one week, Sara feels happy and comfortable. She enjoys her new friends and her college community.
